New religious movements Ramakrishna Mission. The most important developments in Hinduism did not arise primarily from the new samajs. Ramakrishna, a devotee at Daksineshvar, a temple of Kali north of Kolkota (Calcutta), attracted a band of educated lay followers who spread his doctrines. As a result of his studies and visions, he came to the conclusion that “ all religions are true ” but that the religion of a person ’ s own time and place was for that person the best expression of the truth.
