Abstract. This
volume discusses methodological issues in conducting elicitation on semantic topics in a fieldwork situation. While some chapters cover issues specific to certain semantic topics (e.g., modality, comparison, tense and aspect, definiteness), others focus on elicitation techniques more generally, and address methodological issues such as the creation of elicitation plans, the choice of language in which to conduct

Buy Methodologies in Semantic Fieldwork by M. Ryan Bochnak ... This chapter describes, illustrates, and advocates for the targeted construction storyboard methodology for semantic fieldwork. Storyboards are pictorial representations of stories, which consultants are asked to tell in their own words. The criterial property of targeted construction storyboards is that the story is designed to include at least one targeted context that can be used to test hypotheses about
